Maine is submissive to resubmission.

Beautiful Burkeville, Vt., on the shore of Lake Champlain!

Ward caucuses to-night. They are as important as the city caucus.

This senatorial deadlock in New York is costing that state $2,500 a day. Election by the people would do away with that extravagance.

It is peculiarly fitting that Doctor Cook should tell his north pole tale on the vaudeville stage, where sleight-of-hand tricks are common.

Speaker-to-be Champ Clark needs to take a few lessons in the proprieties of speech-making, lest we have a painful repetition of what we have been undergoing during the past few years.

The establishment of a municipal court at St. Johnsbury has been followed by a considerable grist of business. The potential offenders were perhaps just waiting to be tried in an up-to-date manner.

Discussion concerning the hatpin has passed the jocular stage since the death of a man in Boston Wednesday, from the effects of a jab sustained while he was riding on a street car. Either the pin must be regulated as to length, or the point must be protected by a cork tip or otherwise.

In announcing the verdict in the Woodstock murder trial, a contemporary heads its article with: "Italian acquitted." Was the entire nationality on trial, that it should be necessary to thus sweep them all in? Or perhaps it was not easy to spell the respondent's name?

In advocating a snowshoe club for its village, the Waterbury Record says it's too late to form a club this winter. Too late? Good heavens, neighbor, come this way and we will show you several feet of snow, which is proof positive that it isn't too late to drag one weary foot after another through the drifts. It is still winter around Barre.

The idea of a joint, or citizens', caucus has found lodgment in St. Johnsbury, and the candidates for the coming spring town meeting will be chosen by the citizens irrespective of their party affiliations.

There is no reason why a voter's belief on the ship subsidy, the tariff, etc., should enter into his consideration of the respective merits of candidates for town office, and St. Johnsbury will find it to its advantage to obliterate party lines to such an extent.

REASON FOR APPREHENSION.

Perhaps the apprehension regarding the nature of the material to be used in the new federal building in Barre will be appreciated by outsiders are told that in Quincy, Mass., the great granite center of Massachusetts, a plain limestone building was erected for post office purposes by the government, while out in Cleveland, O., the state of limestone, a handsome federal building of granite was erected. Coming nearer home, we find a marble structure in Montpelier; whereas, Montpelier is in the Barre granite belt and is indebted to Barre granite for much of its prosperity. Now, is there any wonder over the local apprehension lest Barre granite should not be used in the construction of the federal building to be erected in one of the most conspicuous positions in the city? With a huge mountain—two of them, in fact—within three miles of the site of the proposed building, it would be strange indeed if the building were to be constructed of anything but Barre granite.

NEW HAMPSHIRE FORESTS SAVED.

Vermont has no Weeks bill to save its mountain forests, but the sentiment in favor of preserving them is gaining ground very rapidly, and the state is trying to do by itself what the nation is doing for New Hampshire. During the past few months, the idea received great impetus through the presentation to the state of the top section of Camel's Hump and a part of a mountain in the vicinity of Peru, in southern Vermont. Prior to that, the establishment of state forest preserves was working as a powerful agency in showing the public the benefit of conservation. However, Vermont is not jealous over New Hampshire's promised good fortune in the Weeks bill, which passed the Senate Wednesday, after having passed the House. On the contrary, we feel like joining with the jubiliations of the New Hampshire press, of which the Concord Monitor furnishes a sample as follows:—

"New Hampshire thanks the nation for saving our mountains, our forests and our river sources, for our benefit and for the nation's benefit. It was a task too large for us, and we appreciate the last moment lift that Uncle Sam has given us. Now our state should do its part in the good work, the great work, the work that must be done." It was, indeed, a tremendous task for New Hampshire to stay the destruction of the White mountain forests unaided,

All modern business should be conducted on the co-operative partnership, mutual benefit, profit-sharing plan, and we accentuate this in our special sales.

Every man who buys one of our Overcoats at this time gets more than his legitimate share of the spoils.

On some coats you can save $10.00; on others, $7.00 to $4.00.

and the aid offered by the nation was well placed. Just what the contemporary refers to as the work which must be done by New Hampshire is not delicate; but we should say that one of the things at least should be the development of a strong sentiment among the people of the state as a whole in favor of conservation not touched by the Weeks bill. The establishment of a forestry bureau (we understand that New Hampshire has none) would be one of the first steps toward that end.

An Agent Writes

"I never dreamed that the company would ever attain to a dividend scale of the proportion which the company now pays." The function of the agent is not to dream, but to work in constantly bringing to public attention the value of life insurance service.
